Brands We're Currently Exploring

We're testing new brands, so we rounded-up a few products that caught our attention.

It's easy to fall into a comfortable beauty routine, but we're testing new brands and want to share some key pieces!

Rancho La Puerta Core Essentials

This collection makes us want to book a vacation. Rancho La Puerta, a massive wellness resort, harnessed the property's gardens and holistic approach to build a skincare collection. In total, there are 37 pieces that cover face and body care. Products that stood out to us included the Herbal Face Serum (US$44.99) and the Calendula Moisture Creme (US$44.99). The Herbal Face Serum harnesses the healing properties of Aloe Vera and the moisturizing properties of Almond Oil. The Calendula Moisture Creme is a little richer in texture, best suited for dry skin. The main ingredient is calendula, known for its antiseptic, antiredness properties. These two products in conjunction would serve your skin well if you plan on laying out beneath Tecate, Mexico sun.

Riversol Sunscreen

Created by dermatologist Dr. Jason Rivers, Riversol targets sensitive skin. We're big advocates of sunscreen and often test out a variety of products, so this was perfect. Riversol's SPF 30 Lightweight Broad Spectrum Sunscreen (CA$39) is currently on our beauty shelf. The oil-free formula spreads easily, absorbs well, and comes with a light tint. This is a physical sunscreen, which, in our humble opinion, provides better protection than chemical sunscreens! It's broadspectrum, but SPF 30 is the bare minimum you need for protection, so keep that in mind.

Kosmea

Kosmea is an Australian-based skincare brand that harnesses the powers of rosehip oil. They offer a wide range of products, but we're currently focusing on their Rose Hip oil (CA$16.99). Rose hip oil, in general, is a fantastic ingredient for oily, acne-prone skin. It has a blend of essential fatty acids, vitamins, and antioxidants. Beyond its anti-acne properties, rose hip oil improves healing. The Kosmea Rose Hip oil is lightweight and absorbs well. It's been a fantastic addition to our PM routine, especially when our skin isn't at its best.
